COLLECTIONS.

Each year we receive many letters from people who wish to buy peonies and who state that they have a certain amount to invest, but that they cannot make a selection when they have to depend entirely upon the descriptions in the catalog. Those who are fortunate enough to visit our fields during the blooming season do not find it a task to make their selections. For those who find it difficult to make a choice, we have made up five collections.

Collection I—12 Peonies for $5.00.

In this collection we have listed 12 good peonies that are selling in most all peony catalogs from 50 to 75 cents each. For one who wishes to obtain 12 medium-priced peonies for $5.00, we recommend this list:

By this time he knows peonies well enough to form his own opinion and select additional varieties, but to choose this first list of 25 is often a task. SOME BEAUTIFUL NEW SHRUBS

Two New Philadelphus

We have often wondered why the Philadelphus or Sweet Syringa or Mock Orange, as it is more commonly called, is not used in yard plantings more than it is.

It is simply because few people know the remarkable beauty of the shrub. The Sweet Syringa is just as beautiful as the Spirea Van Houttei, of which we sell thousands each year, and it is twice as large a bush. It grows to a height of from 8 to 9 feet, is broad in proportion, and covered with beautiful foliage. In the blooming season the entire shrub is covered with great waxy-white flowers, from one and one-half to two inches in diameter. The Syringa has a wonderful perfume. A single shrub in bloom will scent an entire city block with the odor of the orange blossom.

Philadelphus Virginal

Philadelphus Splendens

Lemoine, at Nancy, France, has worked some wonderful improvements in the Syringa of late years, the better ies of which we have kept constantly in touch with. have imported these as they have come out and have d them out here in our trial gardens. We now have ne twenty beautiful varieties that we are propagating hich have proved hardy in our severe Minnesota climate. Two of these we have in sufficient quantity to send out to our friends this fall?

SPLENDENS. Grows to a height of eight feet. Makes a well proportioned bush with long, gracefully drooping branches. An early variety producing great quantities of sweet scented, very large waxy white flowers.

VIRGINAL. Probably, everything considered, the most sensational new shrub introduction of recent years. An upright growing variety, attaining a height of between eight and nine feet. Foliage dark green. Commences to bloom a little later than Splendens, and continues to bloom until frost. As I write this September 3rd I have just picked an armful of Virginal and have a beautiful bouquet before me. Very sweet scented. During the height of the blooming season the blooms are double. Flowers in clusters, and very large.

BEAUTIFUL PLANTS POSTPAID.

Splendens.

MARKING STAKES.

We have some very fine marking stakes for marking peonies in your garden. We have continually coming in to use, samples of about everything that is made in the line of a marking stake, and we think that these which we have on hand are the best of anything that we have seen. They are made of heavy galvanized iron with the name plainly stamped on a copper plate, which makes a very serviceable and neat marking stake. We can furnish these in most varieties at 25 cents a stake, which is just enough to pay us for the cost of handling and the cost of the stake.
